

Greetings from Scottie and the BCEDC!

October 17, 2017

Knowing that the state has passed legislation to site Foxconn in southeastern Wisconsin, I have been thinking that businesses in our area should be leveraging the potential opportunity to become potential suppliers for what they will need as they establish the business in the state.

Yesterday, I spoke to Matt Moroney, the Strategic Economic Initiatives Director in the Governor's office, and asked how I could be able to get the word out about opportunities that could be available from Foxconn and for the ability for our businesses to note their interest in the project.

Matt said that Foxconn is looking to do business with Wisconsin-based businesses, so the link below will give you the opportunity to sign up in the various business segments so you are on the list to be a potential supplier.

This link will bring you to a site that was created by New North which is a central/northeast regional economic development group in the state, but you will note that it is provided for anyone in the state to sign their business up.

Click on the link below. You will need to toggle down into this website, until you see "Join the Directory", and then you can sign your company in to be part of the overall directory.

Hope you may take advantage of this opportunity!
